DEMOCRACY.

We have been informed that a few old fossils so-called Democrats, censure us for our independent course; a course dropped out sometime ago.

It is a source of great regret to us that all Democrats and those who profess to be Democrats, cannot agree with us as to the true policy to be pursued by the Democratic party in the future. We regret it, because there are men who profess to be Democrats, who make great pretensions of being liberal and progressive, that are so narrow in their views they cannot allow one to make a criticism, when the party has clearly been guilty of wrong. It seems to us that such men profess to be Democrats because of the supposed war record of the party, and for no other, or better reason. They will accuse every one of party treason who has independence enough to refuse to ratify and endorse all the foolish errors and wrongs of the past.

These same men take periodical spells of reading people out of the party, who have been Democrats longer than they, and know what the word Democracy should mean; because of just and honest criticism on the dishonest war-course of some old Confederate war-horse, who has forgotten that the late war is over and that Democracy does not mean the Southern Confederacy.

It is sad indeed, that these so-called Democrats cannot see that times have changed and that we progress, that the Democratic party should have other and higher aims than the reward of men for past supposed services in times of war, without regard to their fitness to perform the service needed now.

If the Democratic party, in the South, especially in Tennessee, will reform itself, make itself better and worthy of confidence, move to a higher plane and change its organization from that of an organized mob, for spoils, to that of a compact, closely organized body, with principles emblazoned on its banner, in place of spoils; and make war on the Republican party because of its many corruptions and oppressions, make economy, and good to the people its battle cry, then we will have a Democratic party that will mean something else than reward the old office-holding nobility; and such a party as the founders intended the Democratic party to be.

We are a Democrat, and intend to remain one, because we are opposed to the Republican party in its schemes to centralize the government, its protective tariff policy, by which it builds up the few at the expense of the many, because it fosters monopolies of all kinds and for no other purpose than to perpetuate its power.

This is the kind of a Democrat we are, and we here give notice that we will not be read out of the party by a few old Bourbons who never did and never will get beyond the idea that they belong to a peculiar and favored class, that is entitled by reason of birth to hold all the offices.

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK.

In compliance with a previous announcement, with our next issue of the DEMOCRAT, we will enlarge to a six column paper, and in order to make the necessary arrangements, we will not be able to get out a paper next week.

On the thirteenth of next month we will come out with our six columns, making four extra columns of reading, with many other improvements, which will more than repay for the issue which we will have to miss. We trust our patrons, whose time expires with the next issue, will take the advantage of our liberal offer, by re-subscribing at once, which will be at the old and low rate of one dollar per year; but after the enlargement, we will have to charge one dollar and fifty cents per annum.

We had to incur considerable expenses, in purchasing additional material, to give our readers what they have demanded and what we have desired, and now we trust we will receive such an increased subscription list as will fully justify the outlay we have had to make.

As we are approaching one of the most important periods in the history of Tennessee, we are led to believe we will have a greatly increased circulation of our county paper. And it will be our aim to give our readers all the important, local, State and general news.

The question, of all others, will be the settlement of our State debt—a question no citizen can be indifferent about, for it concerns every citizen of the State. The future prosperity of our State now hangs on the terms agreed upon in settling the State debt.

We will give the readers of the DEMOCRAT what we conceive to be the business of a newspaper, Price and Con., letting each reader make up his own verdict; at the same time we shall not be silent, but shall give expression to what we regard will be best for the interest of our State.

We shall endeavor to make the DEMOCRAT of such a character as no family can afford to be without it, dealing more in facts than in fancy.

We have published the paper in the interest of the people, not party or faction, and, by a continuance, hope to merit an increased patronage.

Mr. Tilden.

(FROM THE BUFFALO COURIER.)

NEW YORK, April 13.—The talk about Mr. Tilden's running for Governor next fall is all on one side. None of it is heard among Mr. Tilden's friends. His enemies seem to think they can blacken him a little more by saying he is still alive. It is not very long since they tried to make every one believe he was dead. Their next discovery may be that he has thrown off twenty or thirty years and again become an active man in middle life. There is no telling to what absurdity in that line their fears and malice may lead. When Jumbo rattled the chains put on his feet at Madison Square Garden and made them fly like a whip-lash, the crowd of spectators fell back with a rush in a state of "acute" that was very much like a panic. Any mention of Mr. Tilden's name seems to have the same effect on the Tammany-Republican allies that the rattle of Jumbo's chains had on the crowd that heard it. "Look out, the elephant's breaking loose," is the cry all round. Such of Mr. Tilden's friends as give any attention to the talk say it is mere trash. Instead of working for the Governorship again, they add, he would probably refuse it even if the whole party made him an offer of it. He has given all the service in that way that he owes, and no more need be expected. The repose of private life suits him better at present than anything else, and his mind is made up not to be drawn out of it to enter another contest for what might be called a second-class prize which he had already won. "Mr. Tilden is not now in politics," one of these friends remarked a few days ago, "and all the talk about him can't bring him in. Should he enter again at any time, it certainly will not be because his enemies keep up a chatter on the subject. His interest in the affairs of the country is as active as ever, but it does not call for personal action of the kind ascribed to him by people who never see him and really know nothing about him." The friends who speak in this way also say that Mr. Tilden enjoys excellent health and is always so busy in one way or another that he can hardly be said to have a spare moment. Most of his time is necessarily spent at Greystone, where he receives many visitors and is accessible to all who present themselves in a proper way. But he is not accessible to mere Paul Pry's who want to poke around and be able to say they have talked with Mr. Tilden in his parlor.

Call for State Democratic Convention.

NASHVILLE, TENN., April 15, 1882.—In obedience to the instructions of our respective committees we hereby call a convention of the Democratic party, to assemble in the hall of the House of Representatives, in the city of Nashville, on Tuesday, the 20th day of June, 1882, at 12 m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor and the transacting of such other business as may properly come before it. We have no power to direct the action of the Democracy in the selection of their delegates, but, in view of antecedents resulting in this joint call, it may not be improper in us to express the hope that the Democrats in the various counties, in their primary meetings, will take such steps and precautions in selecting delegates as will secure Democratic unity and harmony.

Brought to Time.

A young man on a street in Stubenville, with a fez cap, a fragile cane, and smoking a vile cigarette which awakened a suspicion in the minds of the neighbors that a dead mule was in the immediate vicinity, stepped off the sidewalk to allow a woman to pass.

"Thank you," she said.

"Not at all, madame; I assure you I always give way to the weaker sex."

The lady slowed up when she heard this, and came back to the young man.

"What did you observe, sir?"

"I said (smiled forced) that I always gave way to the weaker sex."

"Ah, did you," pursued the woman, grabbing him with a firm hand by the throat-latch. "Do you know who you are (shake) calling the (shake, shake) weaker sex?"

"I—ugh—that is, I—mean to say—you hurt my neck—politeness is constitutional in our—such—family."

"Tis, hey! Well (shake, shake, shake) if you think I'm one of the weaker sex you're off your reckoning."

Here she gave the young man a dextrous flip, which spun him three times around, after which he fell under a fence, while his cane and fez cap flew over into a bed of last year's hollyhocks.

"Now, after this, remember young man, you can't play no weak sex game on me. I propose to vote before that dyspeptic-looking moustache of yours has more than seven hairs on one side and nine on the other."
